

I am outraged that the FCC is considering the relaxation of media ownership so that huge corporations like Viacom, Media News Group, and Clear Channel can continue to absorb independent TV, radio, and newspaper companies to clone broadcasting programs and news throughout the U.S. markets. In my opinion, the balance between network ownership and independent ownership of media companies is already slanted towards the networks advantage. I hate to imagine what would become of media broadcasting content if the FCC continues to rule in favor of the media conglomerates.
